TIP: What does “related to my institutional responsibilities or professional expertise” mean?

The term “institutional responsibilities” refers to any professional responsibilities that you undertake on behalf the University of South Alabama, which may include, for example, research, research consultation, teaching, professional practice, institutional committee memberships, and service on panels such as Institutional Review Board. Professional expertise refers to anything in your area of expertise with the caveat that it shouldn’t be applied too narrowly. This does not mean that this term broadly captures the entirety of one’s field, such as engineering, biology or political science. When evaluating what is related, instead consider aligning your analysis with the appropriate sub-field, such as electrical engineering, molecular biology or political theory.
